GANDHIJ'S EXPERIMENTS TO INTEGRATE ENVIRONMENTAL CONCERNS IN DAILY LIFE

Prof. N. Radhakrishnan

One of the most disturbing aspects of contemporary life is that little do we realize how from the Himalayan heights of materialistic comforts and advancements in various fields, humanity is being led to the abyss of all-round environmental pollution, ecological devastation, ozone depletion, green house effect and so on. Is there anything more frightening than to be told that the earth's forest covers are fast disappearing, the blue waters of the oceans that surround the earth are getting more and more polluted thereby the marine products which cater more than a half of humanity's food requirements are getting depleted and earth's canopy namely the sky is developing holes? This, in turn, would increase several-folds the temperature of the earth. To put more fright into us, we are now told that there are signs of ice melting in the polar-regions which would eventually increase the level of seas which would spell disaster of an unimaginable scale.

Dependent origination

Let us not forget that Man always lived in harmony with Nature and what sustained him in all the crisis he faced in his profound, courageous and determined march towards unraveling the mysteries of various kinds in his respect for all forms of life around him. What has guided him in this long, very often distressing and disappointing and at the same time lively search for identity, is the realization of how everything in nature is dependent on one another. This is the core of the ancient wisdom. The Buddhists explain this as "dependent origination".

Relevance of Gandhi's "Hind Swaraj"

A little book Gandhi wrote in 1909, the Hind Swaraj, highlighted the dangers awaiting humanity if it continues to neglect ecological concerns. The book invited both sharp criticism and appreciation. Many close friends of Gandhi advised him to withdraw the book.

In the Hind Swaraj Gandhi described in graphic details the dangers inherent in man's new-found enthusiasm in high-tech and machines. For reasons unknown, for many years this book was not taken seriously by many and even those who read it cursorily, led to believe that Gandhi aired anti-progressive and anti-scientific views in this book. The British too read it and promptly banned it for wrong reasons. They found it highly seditious. Gandhi was uncompromising in his attack on man's unprincipled exploitation of nature and he did not spare the Western Civilization for its frenzied efforts to consider that science and technology would offer all what humanity needs. Gandhi was misunderstood on this score, for many of his detractors could not fully comprehend the far-sightedness and deep penetration with which Gandhi could predict what would happen to humanity after fifty years or so. As D.G Tendulkar, one of Gandhi's biographers, pointed out even those who understood Gandhi's position could not see that it was not a romanticized picture of the past. "The Earth provides enough to meet every man's need but not for anybody's greed".

To understand Gandhi one has to begin looking at his early experiments in South Africa in community building, farming, reorganizing daily life style of every individual who joined him in the efforts to "living in harmony with nature" through what are known today as 'ashrams' or the communities he founded, both in South Africa (Phoenix Ashram and Tolstoy Farm) and in India (Satyagraha Ashram at Sabarmati and Sevagram Ashram near Wardha).

CLERICAL JOB OPPORTUNITIES IN PUBLIC SECTOR BANKS

Vijay Prakash Srivastava

Banking services in our country are expanding and both public and private sector banks are strengthening their network. All their officer and clerical staff are full time regular employees.

different centres. Based on the performance in recruitment process and taking into account number of vacancies, IBPS prepares a list of candidates for recommending to respective banks for appointment. Banks after completion of formalities make job offer to these candidates. In normal course recruitment process for these banks is conducted annually.
